ABSTRACT

Based on data collected by the American Association of Junior Colleges (AAJC), this directory provides information on 668 junior colleges in the United States and its territories, and Canada for 1959-60. Following introductory material on the scope of the directory, the first section lists the colleges alphabetically by state, providing the following information for each: location; administrative head; AAJC membership; state recognition or accrediting agency; type of control or affiliation; co-educational or single-sex status; date founded; enrollments for fall 1959 broken down by freshman, sophomore, or unclassified status, adult enrollments, and full- or part-time status; summer and cumulative enrollments; and numbers of full- and part-time faculty. After listing institutions added or dropped since 1960, this section provides statewide summaries for all junior colleges and for public and private institutions, which include data on number of colleges, AAJC membership, student enrollments for fall 1959, and full-time equivalent faculty. The following section analyzes junior college growth from 1900 to 1960 and presents data on changes in the number of colleges and enrollments, and types of colleges and accrediting agencies. The final section includes a list of AAJC members; an alphabetical listing of junior colleges; and a directory of junior college organizations and their officers. (HB)

Introduction

The 1961 Directory contains information about junior colleges in the United States, its territories, and Canada. Heavy reliance has been necessarily placed on the accuracy of the reporting institutions.

Certain university extension centers and teachers colleges have been eliminated from this Directory because they no longer predominantly offer a two-year program. Separately organized junior colleges on campuses of senior colleges, general colleges, and lower divisions of four-year colleges and universities have been included only if they are members of the American Association of Junior Colleges. Institutions that deal exclusively with the training of members of religious orders have been included if they are regionally accredited as junior colleges or are active members of the Association. Undergraduate centers and extension centers, as in Pennsylvania and Wisconsin, are included in the Directory because they are essentially two-year colleges and have provided the necessary information.

It should be noted that any apparent decrease, in contrast with previous Directories, in the number of junior colleges or in student enrollment and number of faculty in junior colleges results from the policy lines indicated above.

More extensive and detailed information about junior colleges may be secured in American Junior Colleges, Fifth Edition, edited by Edmund J. Gleazer, Jr., and published by the American Council on Education, 1785 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington 6, D.C., 1960.

Definition of Terms and Key to Abbreviations

AAJC Membership: Membership in the American Association of Junior Colleges is indicated by an "M" or a "P" depending upon whether the membership is full or provisional. Active membership is open to any college which has received complete accreditation or equivalent recognition of any of the types indicated under "recognition" below. Provisional membership is open to newly organized institutions and to others which have not yet received such recognition.

Recognition: The American Association of Junior Colleges does not act as an accrediting agency. Member institutions are prohibited by constitutional provisions from indicating, implying, or publicizing accreditation by this Association. Types of accreditation, recognition, or approval are indicated by symbols as follows:

1. Regional accrediting agencies:
   NE—New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools
   MS—Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools
   NC—North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools
   SA—Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools
   WA—Western College Association
   NW—Northwest Association of Secondary and Higher Schools
2. The symbol "D" denotes accreditation, approval, or recognition by: State Department of Education; the Junior College Accrediting Commission in Mississippi; the Board of Education in the District of Columbia; the Provincial Department of Education in Canada; the Michigan Commission on College Accreditation; or the Massachusetts Board of Regional Community Colleges.
3. The symbol "U" indicates accreditation, approval, or recognition by: Association of State Colleges or its equivalent, State University, or State College.
4. Other symbols are as follows:
   X—Affiliation with the Catholic University of America
   Y—Affiliation with University Senate of the Methodist Church
   Z—Two-year technical curriculums approved by Engineers' Council for Professional Development

Type. Three main types are distinguished: Coeducational, for men only, and for women only indicated by C, M and W, respectively.

Year Organized. Each institution was asked to report the year it was organized as a junior college. In some cases the date of origin of an institution which later developed into a junior college may have been given.

Control. The primary basis for classification is twofold: institutions publicly controlled and institutions privately controlled. The first group is designated State, Local, District (meaning junior college district), and County. Privately controlled institutions are listed as (1) Independent (abbreviated "Ind.") meaning they are undenominational and non-profit; or (2) "Branch" meaning a privately controlled college or university, but located on a separate campus; or (3) Proprietary (abbreviated "Prop."); or (4) Under denominational control or affiliation. In this latter category, the following abbreviations are used:

A. of God—Assemblies of God
AME—African Methodist Episcopal
Chr. Ref.—Christian Reformed
Ch. of Chr.—Church of Christ
Ch. of God—Church of God
Ch. N. Jeru.—Church of the New Jerusalem
Cong. Chr.—Congregational Christian
Disc. Chr.—Disciples of Christ
Ev. Un. Br.—Evangelical United Brethren
Free Meth.—Free Methodist
Friends—Society of Friends

LDS—Latter-Day Saints

Pent. Hol.—Pentacostal Holiness

Pil. Hol.—Pilgrim Holiness

Prim. Bapt.—Primitive Baptist

Ref. Ch. A.—Reformed Church in America

RLDS—Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints

Rom. Cath.—Roman Catholic

Sev. Day Adv.—Seventh Day Adventists

Un. Ch. Can.—United Church of Canada

Enrollment:

Enrollment is given as of October 15, 1959.

Full-time student: student enrolled in 12 or more semester hours.

Freshman: student who has completed less than 28 semester hours of college credit at time of registration.

Sophomore: student who has completed 28 or more semester hours of college credit at time of registration.

Part-time student: student enrolled in at least one course for credit and for less than 12 units.

Special student: student not included in above categories. A special student is classified as an "adult student" if this category exists. If adult category does not apply, a special student is listed under "other."

Total cumulative enrollment: total cumulative enrollment covers June 1, 1959 to May 31, 1960 (both semesters and the 1959 summer session); includes any person who enrolled during this period with no person counted more than once.

Faculty. For the first time the 1961 Directory includes a breakdown, where given, of "instructional" faculty, and "administrative" faculty which includes professional staff not listed in the instructional category. The total full-time faculty equivalent is the sum of instructional and administrative full-time equivalents.

Junior College Growth

EDMUND J. GLEAZER, JR.

LAST NOVEMBER the President's Commission on National Goals made its report to President Eisenhower and the American people. Among the "important things that should be done," the Commission reported, is that "two-year colleges should be within commuting distance of most high school graduates." Also of national interest at about the same time was the conference held on the Two-Year College sponsored jointly by the Center for the Study of Higher Education and the American Association of Junior Colleges, December 5–6, 1960, at Berkeley, California. This first national conference of leaders in education, government, labor, business, and industry evidenced some differences of opinion in regard to the exact role of junior or community colleges and of the most appropriate form of organization and financial support. However, it was the strong consensus of the group that junior and community colleges must provide educational opportunities for a substantially increased proportion of college education in the years ahead. These two expressions on the national level have their counterparts in the states with movement under way in almost all of the states, and particularly in those with rapidly increasing population, to either extend present junior college facilities and services or enact legislation for their initiation and support.

Of special significance as indicators of what the future might expect of the two-year institutions are the Master Plan for Higher Education in California and the report to the Governor of New York and the Board of Regents by the "Heald Committee" which reviewed New York State's needs and resources in higher education. The California Master Plan provides for a "tri-partite" system of higher education in that state, a partnership of junior colleges, state colleges, and the university. Each type of institution is to direct its attention to purposes and programs appropriate to its raison d'etre. Under the plan the junior colleges will be expected to

Explanation of Table V

The apparent decrease from 677 to 663 junior colleges is largely a result of change of programs in a number of university extension centers which leaves them no longer essentially two-year colleges. Twenty-six institutions were dropped from this edition of the Directory because they no longer can be defined as junior colleges (see Introduction). Nine additional two-year colleges have now become senior institutions. Three California evening junior colleges are no longer separate from their day counterparts. 46,294 students were enrolled the preceding year in the institutions dropped. One institution closed during the year. Twenty-three institutions have been added.

Enrollment for the full academic year 1959–60 including the 1959 summer session was 816,071. This is a cumulative total and includes all students. Reporting institutions were instructed to count each student only once. The "cumulative" total gives some indication of the number of different people served by the college during the entire year. As will be noted in a subsequent table a large part of the decrease in enrollment from 905,062 to 816,071 is accounted for by a decrease in adult enrollments. Table VIII shows a total of 640,527 students enrolled on October 15, 1959. It is important to differentiate between the October 15 count and the cumulative. Justification of the cumulative total is found in the large number of students, adults and special students, who are served by the community-type junior colleges in short-term programs through the year.

Explanation of Table VI

Table VI shows the growth in the number of institutions, those under the control of public authority, those that are independent or church-related and the percentage of change between the two main types. Listed among the 663 junior colleges are all institutions accredited by state departments of education or by regional accrediting associations as organized two-year colleges, extension centers or teachers colleges where the programs are essentially of the junior college type. Until 1947–48 there were more junior colleges under private auspices than those publicly supported. However, from that time to the present the increase in the number of public institutions has been fairly consistent while the number of church-related and independent junior colleges has remained relatively steady. Decrease from 400 to 390 public junior colleges as indicated in the table is accounted for largely by no longer listing sixteen extension centers of Indiana and Purdue Universities and three junior colleges in the state teachers colleges of Maryland. Decrease in number of privately supported institutions results from those junior colleges which became 4-year colleges.

increase their enrollments from about 100,000 full-time students in 1960 to 300,000 in 1975.

The New York report indicates that two-year community colleges are an essential and major part of the provision for higher education in that state. Moreover, "the evidence indicates that in the future two-year public institutions must provide collegiate opportunities for a sharply increasing number of young people in this State as elsewhere in the nation." What were described as conservative estimates by the Committee place the total two-year community college requirements in New York State at: 40,000 to 50,000 full-time students within five years (the fall 1959 number was 16,000); 75,000 to 100,000 full-time students within ten to fifteen years; 100,000 to 125,000 full-time students within fifteen to twenty years. New York is also served by a large number of privately supported junior colleges.

In many other states developments have

Explanation of Table VII

Table VII shows comparative growth in enrollments of public and private junior colleges. The number of students in the public institutions has exceeded enrollments in the privately controlled colleges since 1921–22, and the difference increased steadily in favor of the public colleges until 1951–52. Since that time the proportion enrolled in the two types of junior colleges has held fairly constant. In fact, this year the removal of publicly supported institutions formerly listed in the Directory and a decrease in adult students enrolled resulted in an apparent enrollment drop in the public junior colleges while at the same time the private institutions registered an increase from 98,213 to 103,847 students.

A factor to be considered in interpreting the significance of these data is the predominant residential character of the private institutions as compared with the commuting student body of the majority of public institutions. The public junior colleges have many more part-time and adult students enrolled than do the private junior colleges.

been notable; establishment of the Massachusetts Board for Regional Community Colleges and organization of the first institutions under that Board; the continuing dramatic growth of the junior college system in Florida; legislative studies in Pennsylvania and Ohio; Higher Education Commission reports for strengthening the junior college in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, and Washington. These mentioned are only a sample of a period of most unusual activity in the junior college field. Pressures in our environment are forcing society to find effective ways of maintaining opportunities for higher education. The junior college is recognized as one of the important agencies in this process. An accelerating rate of growth can be expected.

Explanation of Table VIII

Table VIII shows freshman and sophomore enrollments as compared with "others." Under the latter caption are included special and adult students. Until some national agreements can be reached on definitions to be used in reporting adult and special students these figures will not be of great significance. Incidentally there is similar need to make reporting more precise of all college enrollments including freshman and sophomore students. Two figures appear in the last two columns. One of these is cumulative (the larger one). As indicated previously this is a head count of all students enrolled during the year but without any student being counted twice. The figure is useful in giving an estimate of the number of different people served by the institutions during the year. The smaller figures (130,285 in one column and 640,527 in the other) represent the number of students enrolled October 15, 1959.

Two factors appreciably affect the apparent decrease in enrollment of "other" students. The institutions listed last year but not this year had substantial programs for adults and special students (20,171 students). These were not counted this year. Reports coming from California institutions give a total of 56,892 adult and special students which last year they reported 132,095. The difference of 75,203 plus 20,171 students in institutions no longer listed comes close to accounting for the decrease from 230,886 adult and special students in October 1958 to 130,285 in October 1959. There is some reason for inferring that the decrease in California enrollment is due largely to policy changes in classification of students.

* The 13 junior colleges that began operation in 1960 are not included in this figure.

Explanation of Table IX

Distribution of enrollments with respect to size of the public and private colleges can be observed in Table IX. As can be readily noted, the public institutions are typically much larger than privately sponsored ones. Some of the small private institutions are operated by religious orders and might be described as single purpose junior colleges, e.g., preparation for teaching in church schools or other church responsibilities. Generally speaking, the public junior colleges will have a larger proportion of adult and part-time students enrolled. One hundred forty-two institutions have enrollments of 1000 or more. Twenty-six have more than 5000 students.

TABLE X

Among the private and church-related junior colleges the breakdown is as follows:

Independent, non-profit	87
Branches of privately controlled colleges or universities	4
Baptist Colleges	28
Roman Catholic Colleges	60
Lutheran Colleges	15
Methodist Colleges	24
Presbyterian Colleges	9
Proprietary Colleges	4
Others*	42
Total	273

* These represent 17 denominational bodies and the YMCA.

Explanation of Table X

TYPES OF JUNIOR COLLEGES

Public or tax supported junior colleges now number 390, while the privately controlled or church-related institutions total 273. Table X shows the distribution of control among the non-tax supported junior colleges.

The co-educational junior college is the prevailing type with a total of 548 institutions. There are 71 junior colleges for women and 44 for men. Generally, in co-educational public junior colleges, men outnumber women by more than two to one.

Explanation of Table XI

REGIONAL ACCREDITATION OF JUNIOR COLLEGES

Table XI was first used in the 1958 Directory because of growing interest among junior colleges in regional accreditation. There is great variation among the regions and the states in the proportion of junior colleges regionally accredited. A little more than half of the nation's junior colleges now are regionaly accredited. In view of the importance of regional accreditation in the public mind, those areas in which few junior colleges are accredited may well wish to consider appropriate steps for meeting this problem. Data for Table XI are presented as of October 15, 1959.

Junior College Faculties

Full-time faculty of 20,105 held about the same as the preceding year, while part-time faculty increased from approximately 13,400 to 14,282. The total full-time equivalent faculty numbered 25,105. (See Tables I–IV of the Junior College Directory on pages 6–33 of this issue, for instructional and administrative faculty figures and for summaries of faculty by states.)
